

Institute for Humane Studies

“We believe that ideas within the classical liberal tradition serve as the foundation for the good society — an intellectually open, tolerant, and pluralistic society — in which individuals and communities thrive in peace, prosperity, and mutual respect. For those ideas to take root, it is essential they are taught, explored, challenged, and developed in higher education.” (taken from theihs.org)

Institute for Humane Studies is made of donors who are passionate about the enduring principles that underlie free society and want to educate future generations in those principles. These donors want the free-market society to thrive and donate to do their part to make that happen.
