

Mercatus Center

“The Mercatus Center is a research center at George Mason University that advances knowledge about how markets solve problems and help us lead happier, healthier, and richer lives. For more than 40 years, Mercatus Center has supported leading talent and scholarship in the mainline economics tradition, applying rigorous research to real-world concerns. Through our continuing efforts to bridge the gap between theory and practice, we strive to realize a world where markets operate at their full potential to increase abundance, civility, and well-being.”
(Taken from www.mercatus.org)

The scholars at the center make a principled and solid case for market economics and individual liberty using the best university research. They’re making a powerful difference stop the nonsense and restore freedom, inspiring a brave new wave of economics scholars.

The Mercatus Center aims to educate – to truly educate – our students, elected officials, and anyone else who’ll listen!
